The management of Premium Power is committed to sound environmental practices, and not least the prevention of pollution and compliance with applicable environmental legislation.

Although the activities of Premium Power do not have any significant adverse environmental impacts, it is company policy to minimise all adverse environmental impacts in line with the need for sustainable development.

Towards this end, Premium Power applies the principles of reduce, reuse and recycle.

Consistent with the company's commitment to sound environmental practices, Premium Power actively promotes and supports, through its services to the wider business community, electrical energy efficiency and the substitution of renewable energy sources for non-renewable energy sources. The environmental benefits of these services are reduced consumption of natural resources and environmental pollution, not least the reduced emission of greenhouse gases, but also through the prevention of waste in-process materials.

The implementation of this policy neither necessitates nor justifies the implementation of a formal environmental management system.

Alan O'Kelly, Director.
